NATURE OF THE CASE

1. Plaintiffs are all former class members in Portis v. City of Chicago, No. 02 C 3139.

The class certified in that case was defined as:

all persons who, from May 1, 2000 through September 3, 2004, were arrested on ordinance violations which carry no jail time in the City of Chicago and who were detained for more than two hours after all administrative steps incident to the arrest, except non-discretionary ministerial acts, were completed. The class is further limited to those persons who (1) were not fingerprinted by defendants after being brought into custody; and (2) were eligible for release on personal recognizance bond pursuant to Rule 553(d) of the Illinois Supreme Court.

2. On July 23, 2010, the Seventh Circuit decertified the class in the Portis case and remanded the case for further proceedings consistent with the Court's opinion.

3. Plaintiffs have been arrested for ordinance violations that are punishable by fine only, not jail sentences, and were not fingerprinted. They bring this action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §§1983 and 1988, challenging a policy and practice of the City of Chicago of detaining non-fingerprinted ordinance arrestees for unreasonably long periods from arrest to release. The unnecessary delays result from the CPD's policy of processing plaintiffs in the same manner as other arrestees, regardless of the crime and even though the process includes steps that according to the Chicago Police Department's ("CPD") General Orders ("GOs") and Department Special Orders ("DSOs"), are not necessary to process non-fingerprinted ordinance violators like plaintiffs.

4. Specifically, plaintiffs have been arrested and transported to a police station where they were placed in a holding area while an arrest report and quasi-criminal complaint was prepared, a name check was run to determine whether there were any outstanding warrants, charged with an ordinance violation that is punishable by fine only, a probable cause determination was made, and the watch commander who satisfied with the identification and the absence of any warrants, decided that it was unnecessary to fingerprint them. At that point, according to the CPD's GOs and DSOs and to Ill.S.Ct.R. 553(d), each plaintiff was eligible for release on an I-bond, and there was nothing left to do but to issue a central booking ("CB") number, secure their signature on an I-bond, and release them. Instead the CPD transferred plaintiffs from the holding area to a lockup area and placed them in a lockup cell, notwithstanding the fact that there was no law enforcement reason for doing so. When plaintiffs were placed in a cell, unlike other arrestees, they (a) were not to be fingerprinted because both their identity and the fact that they were not wanted on an outstanding warrant had been established; and (b) were not awaiting a probable cause and/or bond hearing.

5. Furthermore, plaintiffs were not under the influence of drugs or alcohol or otherwise in need of any medical treatment that required further detention and there were no events, routine or unusual, occurring in the district station at the time they became eligible for release that should have delayed their prompt release.

6. Moreover, placing plaintiffs in a lockup cell causes foreseeable lengthy delays and routinely results in unreasonably long periods of detention -- more than four hours and often more than 12 hours.

7. It takes lockup personnel significantly more time to process plaintiffs in order to place them in a cell and monitor them while they are incarcerated than to prepare the I-bond for their prompt release.

8. This practice and policy has been approved, condoned and employed by the City of Chicago. Plaintiffs have documentation of thousands of occurrences where the defendant has detained non-fingerprinted ordinance arrestees for unreasonably long periods of time pursuant to this practice. These unreasonable delays are foreseeable, citywide, and easily avoidable.

9. Plaintiffs seek damages to redress deprivations under color of law, of rights, privileges and immunities secured by the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

10. The Court has jurisdiction of this cause pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§1331 and 1343 and pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §§1983 and 1988.

11. Venue is proper in the Northern District of Illinois under 28 U.S.C. §1391(b) because the defendant is in Illinois and in the district and all events giving rise to the claims occurred in the district.

12. This complaint is related within the meaning of Local Rule 40.4(a)(2) to Portis v. City of Chicago, No. 02 C 3139, that is currently pending before the Honorable Robert W. Gettleman.

THE PARTIES

13. Plaintiffs are citizens of the United States and at all times relevant hereto were residents of the State of Illinois.

14. Defendant City of Chicago is a municipal corporation, a body politic, existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Illinois.

CITY OF CHICAGO
PROCEDURES AND PRACTICES

295. At all times relevant to this complaint, the City of Chicago has had a policy and practice through its community policing programs of vigorously arresting and detaining people allegedly violating ordinances prohibiting loitering, disorderly conduct, panhandling, scalping tickets, peddling and other similar ordinances which impose only a fine.

296. The city is aware that people arrested for these minor violations will not have to post a cash bond in order to be released, are rarely prosecuted and/or found guilty of violating these ordinances and, even if they are found guilty, the fines are seldom paid because the people are indigent. In fact, 85% of the complaints filed against persons arrested for non-jailable ordinance violations are non-suited.

297. The city believes that people arrested and briefly detained for these offenses will resume these activities upon release from custody and believe therefore that merely taking a person into custody for a short duration does not prevent these individuals from being a "public nuisance."

298. There is a policy and widespread and systemic practice in the City of Chicago of processing individuals arrested on minor ordinance offenses that carry no jail time and not fingerprinted in the same manner it processes individuals arrested for more serious offenses even though the process includes steps that according to the CPD's GOs and DSOs, are not necessary to process plaintiffs. For example, after they are eligible for release on an I-bond, plaintiffs are prepared for custody and placed in a lockup cell, notwithstanding the fact that there is no law-enforcement reason for doing so. Specifically, plaintiffs were placed in a cell even though, unlike other arrestees, they (a) were not to be fingerprinted because both their identity and the fact that they are not wanted on an outstanding warrant had been established, and thus any additional name checks were redundant; (b) were not awaiting a probable cause and/or bond hearing; and (c) according to the CPD's GOs and DSOs, were eligible for release on an I-bond. And plaintiffs were not under the influence of drugs or alcohol or otherwise in need of any medical treatment that required further detention.

299. The city admits that its policy of treating non-fingerprinted ordinance violators like it treats all other arrestees foreseeably results in lengthy delays in their release -- routinely causing unreasonably long detentions of more than four hours and often more than 12 hours from arrest to release.

300. Furthermore, all of the processing steps performed after plaintiffs were transferred to lockup and placed in a lockup cell could easily have been performed while they were in the secured holding area and without transferring them to lockup.

301. Moreover, at the time plaintiffs are eligible for release, the tasks necessary to admit plaintiffs to lockup and then prepare them for release were more time consuming than the tasks necessary to have the I-bond -- which the plaintiff is already entitled to -- signed and effectuate the plaintiff's release.

302. The plaintiffs' prolonged detentions are not the result of completing tasks that have legitimate law-enforcement purposes and thus constitute needless delay, delay for delay's sake, and/or delay deliberately created so that the process becomes the punishment.

303. The city did not document any explanation for the length of plaintiffs' detentions, despite the fact that it was either aware of or should have known that detentions of "longer than four hours" in which no probable cause hearings were contemplated "require an explanation for the length of the plaintiffs' detentions." Chortek v. City of Milwaukee, 356 F.3d 740, 747 (7th Cir. 2004) (citing Arlotta v. Bradley Ctr., 349 F.3d 517, 523 (7th Cir. 2003, Gramenos v. Jewel Companies, Inc., 797 F.2d 432, 437 (7th Cir. 1986), and Moore v. Marketplace Rest., Inc., 754 F.2d 1336, 1350-51 (7th Cir. 1985)).

304. In addition to plaintiffs, there are approximately 16,000 persons arrested from May 1, 2000 to September 3, 2004, for ordinance violations that carry no jail time, whose identity and warrant status has been determined and it had been decided that they will not be fingerprinted, and were not under the influence of alcohol or drugs and were not in ill health, approximately 12,000, or roughly 75%, are nevertheless placed in a lockup cell and detained for four or more hours from arrest to release without any documented justification.

305. The policy described herein constitutes a widespread practice that, although not authorized by written law or regulation, is so permanent and well settled as to constitute a custom or usage with the force of law and amounts to an official policy of the City of Chicago.

DAMAGES

306. As a direct and proximate result of the practices, policies and procedures of the defendant, plaintiffs were detained for an excessive period of time, thus suffering a loss of liberty.

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs request that this Court:

- (a) enter judgment on behalf of plaintiffs and against defendant for monetary damages to be determine at trial;
- (b) enter judgment for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs incurred in bringing this action; and
- (c) grant plaintiffs any and all other relief as law and justice demand.
